FACILITATOR: Dr Norman Swan, Health journalist, broadcaster and commentator Friend or Foe? The media in a crisis. There is nothing more certain than during a crisis the media will be there. Depending on the crisis and where you sit in it, the media can inform, assist or make things a lot worse. And often it's all three on the same day. Trouble is that you can't absolutely control which audiences get what information. But what you can also be certain of is if there's a fog such as during war or for any other reasons, the tasks of communicating become much harder.	FACILITATORS: Prof Suzanne Robinson AFCHSM CHM, Deakin University, and Luke Baxby, Deloitte and Assoc Prof Richard Norman, Health Economist and Prof Tim Shaw, Digital Health Cooperative Research Centre (CRC) and Dr Libby Thomas, Curtin University School of Public Health The future of healthcare in Australia: designed for consumers, enabled by digital, and accessible for all	FACILITATORS: Adj Assoc Prof Bernie Harrison FCHSM CHE, Director Improvement Academy, ACHS and Anthony Lock, Principal Consultant ASCEND Human Factors & Leadership Development, Former Director of Patient Safety Royal Perth Hospital Required to lead change and innovation in a rapidly changing world?
